When a Will Is Not Enough - WSJ
While a will is a necessary document that every person who owns assets should have, it is still a relatively simple document that may not cover everything you want it to. You may want to consider creating an estate plan that involves the use of a living trust, plus other important documents like a power of attorney for finances and health care directives.

When is a Will Not Enough? - Bloomsburg Law
A will alone cannot illuminate your wishes about your personal health care and end of life decisions. For example, if you are in a vegetative state, a will does not tell your family whether or not you would want mechanical intervention measures, or whether or not you would prefer to be an organ donor.

If we think we are "not enough" or "too much," we surely are. Similarly, when you give a gift, create artwork, or perform any task with the thought that it's "not enough" or "too much," it surely will be." — Alexandra Katehakis, Mirror of Intimacy: Daily Reflections on Emotional and Erotic Intelligence.
