Winnicott calls the place where illusion and reality meet "transitional space," in which God is and is not our creation. Most importantly, we don't struggle to say God is one or the other, for he is both. Our first transitional objects are a teddy bear, blankie, or special toy.

Where does belief in God come from? - godblog

There is no doubt that God created the earth and the stars, and yes, the universe, including the space between these objects. The Bible speaks about three heavens . The first one is what the birds and the clouds inhabit, the second heaven is where the stars and moon (and space) are, but the third heaven, is not just beyond our solar system or our galaxy, or even beyond the known universe.
