A fountain pen is a writing instrument which uses a metal nib to apply a water-based ink to paper. It is distinguished from earlier dip pens by using an internal reservoir to hold ink, eliminating the need to repeatedly dip the pen in an inkwell during use. The pen draws ink from the reservoir through a feed to the nib and deposits it on paper via a combination of gravity and capillary action.

Fountain pens do a fantastic job of drawing precise, fluid linework. They're far easier to transport than dip pens yet more spontaneous and lively than fineliners if you plan to sketch on the go. Drawing with ink teaches confidence, plus the ability to compromise when lines don't quite go the way you want.

Pigmented inks can clog fountain pens though. So when buying waterproof inks to use in fountain pens, make sure the label on the ink bottle specifically states that the ink is safe for fountain pen use. But even so, you'll definitely want to clear out the ink and wash your pen if you know you won't be using it for weeks.
