Permanent paperback book covers are usually sold in several sizes that are cut or trimmed to fit the book height. They also feature a self-adhesive, delay-bond adhesive that allows repositioning to eliminate place errors during application, but the adhesive cures permanently several hours after application so the covers cannot be removed without damaging the book.

If using a cereal box or similar packaging, it is best to lay the printed sides together and leave the plain sides to the outside. Cut a strip of contact paper that is twice the size of the book cover with an extra inch all around. Place the cardboard rectangles side by side on the backing side of the contact paper.
