The Globalisation of Modern Architecture

The Globalisation of Architecture is an incredibly rich work, ambitious and broad-ranging. It is the product of an academic pursuit separate from his life as a practitioner and has won plaudits from Martin Wolf , chief economics commentator for the Financial Times , sociologist Scott Lash and Charles Jencks .

The Globalisation of Modern Architecture by Robert Adam

Modern architecture progressed with faith in reason. It introduced the concept of internationalization in architecture, whereby designs of offices, schools, hospitals and housing have been based on multifunction. This style, however, has been fast replaced by postmodernism in which concepts are set on universally accepted ideologies.
