Form an effective study group. A study group will be most effective if it is comprised of people who are all committed to achieving a good grade. An ideal study group should have between three and five members who meet for between one and three hours. Study sessions less than an hour are likely to be rushed.

5 Tips for an Effective Study Group - University of Utah

Organizing teachers into small groups to promote collegial interchange and action is not a new idea. However, organizing entire faculties into study teams to bring about school improvement is unusual. Study groups have been a dominant feature of school improvement in the Richmond County Public Schools in Augusta, Georgia, since 1987.
